Angola Cease-Fire Explosion Accord Is Reached

By William Claiborne for 73 years.

Washington Part Service PRETORIA — A cease-fire in the 13-year war in Angola was to take effect Monday night as South Africa, Angola and Cnba announced that they have agreed to begin a disengagement of forces on Wednesday.

The truce is intended to lead to a complete withdrawal of South Afnican troops from southern Angola by Sept. [In Lisbon, the European spokesman for UNITA, the main rebel group fighting the Angolan government, said the cease-fire did not apply to his organization, Reuters reported. The spokesman said that UN-ITA would continue to fight until the Angolan government agreed to hold negotiations.] Foreign Minister R. F. Botha of South Africa announced that President Pieter W. Botha had invited the United Nations secretary-general, Javier Pérez de Cuéllar, to visit South Africa in the "very near fu-

In June, a huge bloom of algae, resulting from excess nitrates and phosphates in the sea, produced an eerie one-meter-thick (three-font-thick) blanket of foul-smelling white foam that covered many of Sylt's beaches

In addition, Sylt was the first place in West Germany where seals died in a recent epidemie that killed about 7,000 of them, or half the North Sea's seal population. Many scientists say pollution had weakened the seals' immunological systems, enabling a highly contagious virus to kill them

"For the Germans, it is quite a shock to have pollution associated with Sylt," said Vokker Popp, who organized a demonstra-tion late in July in which 30,000 people formed a 40-kilometer (25-mile) chain from one end of the island to the other to protest sea pollution.

The political stagecraft was deft. At the Atlanta convention and at the rallies that followed, he was introduced to the thumping beat of Neil Diamond's recording of "Coming to America," the bass turned up extra load to make the earth shudder, if not move. He had a bitle of the rhetorical beat of the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson and a lot of the red, white and blue optimism of President Ronald Reagan's "Morning in America" campaign of four years ago. He had feelings.

Not everything followed a script. Last week, for example, the Massachusetts governor spent much of his time dealing with

This guy understands your life; he lives your life," says Dan Payne, Mr. Dukakis's media consultant.

That was precisely the point of the folksy videotape, narrated by his cousin, the actress Olympia Dukakis, that was used to intro-duce Mr. Dukakis at the convention. The video, carefully produced by Mr. Payne to have the look of a home movie, revolved around the bouses in the governor's life, including the one in which be grew up. In a few months these children will take an elementary school entrance examination that many parents believe may determine the future of their children's lives.

In addition, the 5-year-olds were learning the social skills that Japanese consider essential to life in their crowded land: the ability to work happily in a group while submerging one's ego; to endure difficulties without complaint, and to "If you can endure like this you should be able persevere at a task until it is accomplished.

"This is not for learning technical knowledge," said Hideo Ohori, director of the Growing Buds school, which operates the summer program. "What the good primary schools want is this kind of life attitude and life style. A primary school is a small society, and it is important to have the attitude of being able to do something with endurance and do it to the last.

"I think Japanese children are being overprotected by their parents, so we aim to overcome this," be added.

With these intentions, three busloads of exu-

After a dearly sleepless night for many, who were too excited to settle down at the Japanese inn, the group arrived at the campsite where they were to make a meal together and then create a village from tree branches, cardboard boxes and string. . According to the teachers, these simple camping events were designed to teach the children to cooperate, to obey commands and, of course, to gaman suru, an often-used Japanese term that means to suffer bravely and endure. These skills are valued highly by Japan's education establishment

The Ministry of Education has said the ideal primary school program should teach its young charges to bear hardship, "to listen to the opinions of others, to admit frankly one's mistakes or. faults and to behave unselfishly.".

For parents paying $450 to send their child to camp for three days, the immediate issue was helping their offspring learn the skills needed to cope with the next 10 or 15 years of academic competition and the coming "exam hell." Yuriye Negishi, a mother of one of the 5-year-olds, who worries about putting too much pres-sure on such young children, said the reality was that to get into a top elementary school attached to one of Japan's prestigious universities, "you need to have good points; everyone does some preparation, so mine must, too." In Japan, graduating from one of the few top colleges is almost a prerequisite to finding a highstatus niche in government or business. A large percentage of Foreign Ministry and other career government officials, for instance, are graduates of Tokyo University, considered the nation's best.

"What you really need to get ahead is the best ducation, and by that I mean the prestige of the school," said Merry White, a Boston University sociologist and a specialist on Japanese education. Because entrance to the choice universities is based primarily on exam scores, competition to get into the senior high schools that produce

Younger children, likewise, compete assiduously to enter the middle schools that send the most students to the best senior high schools. Competition is keen for entering the elementary schools that feed the best middle schools as well.

Schools that act as "feeders" into the top universities are especially coveted. As a result, juku, or after-school schools, dedicated to helping children excel in tests, are thriving these days, even for kindergartners. Children sometimes must also compete to enter the best juku.

windshield.

Growing Buds operates about a dozen juku in Tokyo for the under-12 set. Class enrollment has quadrupled since the mid-1970s. The three-day retreat for 5- and 6-year-olds is one of its most popular courses and has doubled in size in recent years. This year more than 300 kindergariners will make the trek, the first opportunity for many of them to spend a night away from their family.

The mouotain program does oot offer the rigorous academic fare that is a staple for older children, who often attend classes every night and on weekends. Wearing "persevere" headhands, the more advanced students struggle to memorize the thousands of facts vital to success on school exams.

U.S. Official Criticizes Israelis Over Handling Of Palestinian Problem

JERUSALEM - A U.S. assistant secretary of state called on the Israeli government Monday to step up its efforts to talk with moderate Palestinian leaders.

The diplomat, Richard W. Murphy, also criticized military tactics being used to quell the eight-month Palestinian uprising in the Israelioccupied territories.

Mr. Murphy met with Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin for what he later said had been a very frank exchange on the Israeli policies of detaining Palestinian activists without trial, deporting them and demolishing Palestinian homes. "Administrative detentions, demolitions, deportations --- we don't think they're the way to go," Mr. Murphy said. "We don't agree with Israel. On that, we've had a very frank exchange." Since the uprising began in De-cember, 2,500 Palestinians have been jailed for up to six months without trial, 29 Palestinian nationalists have been deported to Lebanon and 84 homes in the occupied territories of the West Bank and Gaza Strip have been destroyed.

According to widespread reports in the region, he hopes to meet there with a delegation of prominent Palestinians, in an effort to advance the preliminary discussioo held by Secretary of State George P. Shultz this spring with two Palestinian-American academics.

Previous attempts at such talks have fallen through on the question of whether the Palestinian delegates had ties to the Palestine Liberation Organization, which both the United States and Israel have

Israel said Monday that Palestinians had reduced the oumber of their trips between Jordan and the West Bank by about 50 percent because of fears that Amman would sever all links with the territory. Renters reported from the West Bank Police Minister Haim Bar-Lev said that more Palestinians had been staying put oo both sides of the Jordan River since Amman began turning over its role in the West Bank to the PLO.

Mr. Bar-Lev was touring the Al-lenby Bridge, which after 21 years of Israeli occupation still links the 850,000 Palestinians of the West Bank to their former ruler, Jordan. "Residents of the West Bank are confused, perplexed, distressed and worried," he said at a news confer-"They don't want to find CRCC. themselves on the other side suddenly and the bridges closed." King Hussein of Jordan has promised to keep the two bridges

In an apparent effort to increase Palestinian confidence and the flow of traffic, the military announced Sunday that it was extending hours at the bridges and dropping a requirement that Palestinians prove that they had paid their taxes before crossing.

Some Palestinians who were interviewed said the drop in travel had predated the king's disengagement. They said that Israel had barred residents of entire towns from crossing the bridges as punishment for violent anti-Israeli demonstrations.

CAIRO - Sudan's capital and three other cities have been declared disaster areas following floods caused by torrential rains that left about one million people homeless, Egypt's Middle East News Agency reported Monday. In a dispatch from Khartoum the agency said that "fewer than a dozen" persons died in the floods. It said there was a senious food shortage, and that anti-government riots had occurred in some districts. Sebools and universities were closed, it added.

The agency said Foreign Minis-ter Hussein Suleyman Abu Saleh appealed for international help at a oews conference in Khartoum on Sunday night.

Five Egyptian C-130 military transport planes flew to Sudan on Sunday with tents, medical supplies and food.

Another five shipments were flown to Khartoum on Monday.

The floods were the worst since 1946, the news agency quoted Su-danese officials as saying. They did not mention any casualties. Some Cairo newspapers said that dozens of people died. Mr. Abu Saleh said that Khar-toum, the eastern cities of Kassala and Showak, and the northern city of Ed Damer were declared disaster areas after floods triggered by heavy rains Thursday and Friday. Kassala is 400 kilometers (250 miles) east of Khartoum. Ed Damer is 260 kilometers northeast of the capital.

The foreign minister said he had-briefed ambassadors in Khartoum and had taken them oo a flight over the capital to survey the scene.

Finance Minister Omar Noureddayem said about one million people were left homeless in the afflicted areas, 5,000 of them in the Khartoum region.

Sudan has a population of about 23 million, almost four million of them in the Khartoum area.

Mr. Abu Saleh said: "Entire villages and districts have been isolated by the flooding, and rescue forces have not been able to reach them because of the high water level.'

Fire Risks Persist on London Subway

LONDON (Reuters) - Fire hazards on London's Underground frain network, where 31 people died in a blaze in November, will take years to chiminate, a spokesman said on Monday.

An internal review of safety on the world's oldest subway system found that thousands of miles of electrical cables are covered with rubber of other materials that give off large amounts of smoke when burned. The spokesman said the report by the Signals and Electrical Engineer-ing Department also showed many high-voltage cables are insulated with paper soaked with oil. He said even if the Underground's program of replacing cables with low-smoke alternatives was speeded up, it would still take many years to complete. The system has carried out a series of telephone and telex service and safety improvements in response to the fire Nov. 18 at King's Cross

PARIS — French police perched atop high buildings on Monday, awaiting another appearance of a phantom pilot who has been flying a small aircraft low over the capital at night in violation of minimum altitude rules.

They seek to identify the aircraft and charge the pilot with a violation of flying regu-lations. The military is also involved in the hunt, but be-cause the pilot flies low, he evades existing radar.

At least four times in the past week, he has droned over Paris at less than 300 meters (1,000 feet). Regulations limit aircraft to a minimum alutude of twice that figure.

Witnesses spotted the craft over the southern part of the city on Sunday night. Some said it was a small aircraft with two engines. Others described SEOUL (Reuters) --- Chun Kyung Hwan admitted in court on Mon-day that he accepted thousands of dollars from businessmen during the seven years that his older brother, Chun Doo Hwan, served as president of South Korea, but he denied peddling influence.

Mr. Chun, 45, is charged with embezzling more than $10 million in public funds, tax evasioo and taking bribes as head of the state-backed Saemaul Rural Development Agency. Twelve other officials of Saemaul also are on trial.

Mr. Chun said he received 200 million won ($275,800) from a South Korean businessman but said the money went to a Saemanl training program. He also admitted accepting 17 million won ($23,400) from a hospital president but denied this influenced him to block construction of another hospital in the same city.

Ship Attack Has Hurt Greek Tourism

ATHENS (AP) - A terrorist attack aboard a cruise ship last month has hurt Greece's tourist industry by frightening away thousands of visitors, tourism officials reported.

The terrorist attack, which left nine dead and more than 90 injured, occurred as the cruise ship was returning from a day of island-hopping.

Shultz, on Latin Tour, Emphasizes the Need Mary and Attachmentant Someward (DCC) A second (DCC For Economic Reform

💞 By Eugene Robinson

Washington Post Service RIO DE JANEIRO - Secretary of State George P. Shultz has assumed an old role during his tour of South America: that of the college professor, delivering lectures in countries that recently returned to democracy after years under military dictatorships — Argentina, Urágnay and Brazil. At each stop, he has had praise for their political reforms, remarking often that South America is setting an example for the rest of the world.

But Mr. Shultz has emphasized that the United States believes the necessary oext step is economic reform, and that without it the job is incomplete.

"Domestic economic policy most be in tune with global eco-nomic reality," he said in Montevideo, at the headquarters of the Uruguayan central bank. "Countries unable to change their domes-tic policy will be the victims of change in the global economy." The countries around the world that have made economic progress, Mr. Shultz said in Argentina, "are the ones that have opened themselves up, respected the market-place, privatized things."

Mr. Shultz, who taught at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the University of Chi-Cago, has even made the issue of Central America an economic one during this trip. In criticizing the Sandinista government of Nicaragua, he has focused not on political issues hot on what he describes as the collapse of the Nicaraguan economy. Other governments in Central America are producing growth and controlling inflation, he said, while "the government of Nicaragua has produced a failure." His stop in Argentina came as

Mr. Shultz clearly has great respect for what Mr. Alfonsin has done in consolidating Argentine democracy, and wants to help him in any way he can. lo addition, U.S. officials realize the depth of Argentina's economic problems.

Mr. Shultz's economic message for Argentina was simple: fiscal restraint, privatization of state in-dustries and the lowering of harriers to international trade.

The case of Brazil, however, was more complicated. South America's largest country also suffers from severe inflation. But Brazil has built the world's 10th largest economy by going almost directly against the grain of Mr. Shultz's advice; that is, by maintaining a large state enterprise sector, extensively protecting such industries as computers and maintaining a heavy fiscal deficit.

Mr. Shultz talked to Brazilian officials about U.S. concerns that their big arms industry would sell weapons to nations like Libya, about Brazil's refusal to acknowledge patent rights for pharmaceutical products and other issues.

Officials traveling with Mr. Shultz characterized the talks as good ones. But that assessment seemed to stem from the mild public statements by Brazilian officials that followed the discussions, as opposed to the anger voiced after earlier talks at what they had con-sidered U.S. preaching. None of the major issues on the table in Brazil was really resolved.

The reason that Mr. Valère had to prove his existence is that it has been questioned by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Professing that he had been kept unaware of the cootroversy swirl-ing around him by his French busi-ness agent, Mr. Valère said he had agreed to come to the United States after officials of the Simic Galleries tracked him down in France. Mr. Valère revealed at the news conference that he had since canceled his agreement with the French agent, Mr. Frochter.

Simic is bolstering its case with the records of a painting test that was conducted by the French au-thorities in Mr. Valère's studio. In that test, according to records sup-plied by the gallery, he successfully completed a painting similar to those hanging oo the gallery's walls over a three-day period.

In a similar test, Mr. Valère painted a local scene after arriving in Carmel last week.

One of the findings that helped prompt the investigation was the discovery that up to 90 paintings a year appear under Mr. Valère's name, a rate that would push the talents of any artist. But when asked if he ever re-

In Mexico, Resentment of the Capital

By Larry Rohter New York Times Service

HERMOSILLO, Mexico — A popular bumper sticker seen here and in other cities across the interior of Mexico demands, "Chilangos go home." In the same spirit, walls here and elsewhere are covered with graffin urging Mexicans, "Do something for your country: Kill a chilango," or asking that "God protect us from the chilangos."

In Mexican slang, a chilango is a native of Mexico City. The capital's 20 million or so residents often employ the term affectionately to describe themselves - people who speak differently than those from the provinces and who are accustomed to a more driving, competitive way of life.

But to many Mexicans outside the capital, the word chilango, or the commonly used derogatory epithet guacho, is synonymous with arrogance, braggadocio, pompousness, and a general know-it-all attitude.

"Those guachos believe they are the only true Mexicans," said Francisco Santa Cruz, a print shop owner in Hermosillo who has to go to Mexico City on business more often than he would like. "If they are not popular with the rest of us, it is because they are so damned overbearing. Even with all the crime and corruption they have down there, they really do think they are smarter and more sophisticated than anybody else." He went on: "In the capital, if you ask for directions, they send you somewhere else on purpose. The cabdrivers like to rip you off by driving you around in circles. In the provinces, people are frank and open; but down there, I tell you, they are a different breed."

Popular sentiment against chilangos runs strong in areas as widely separated as Yucatan in the far southeast and Guadalajara in the west, but is believed to be strongest in terrible than that of Attila the Hun."

Mexico's northern states. A satirical Tijuanabased magazine, Zeta, last year organized a Committee to Eradicate Chilangos, and a regional best seller is called: "The Hunter of Guachos."

"It's a very serious problem here," said Gerardo Cornejo, director of the Colegio de Sonora, a research institute in Hermosillo, capital of the northern border state of Sonora. "Regionalism may be a oormal phenomenon in any country, bot when it takes on such ugly and blind characteristics and comes to divide a nation that needs to be united, it becomes a dangerous force."

The complaints other Mexicans make about natives of the capital soond remarkably like the stereotypes Americans often harbor about New Yorkers. In "The Hunter of Guachos," the author, José Teheran, de-scribes the chilango as a "plundering species" that is "contemptious of the habits and cus-toms of others; indifferent, impudent, infallible, and excessively cunning of tongue; un-derhanded, greedy, and capable of anything."

A U.S. diplomat tells of taking a group of hard-driving New Yorkers to a meeting with officials of an important ministry. Afterward, when she sought to make amends for the visitors' brusque and aggressive behavior, her offer of an apology was waved away. "Oh, that's all right," she recalled being told. "We understand. New Yorkers are the chilangos of the United States." As Mexico's industrial center, the capital has been especially hard hit by the economic crisis, which has closed factories and increased the number of unemployed. But cities in the north such as Hermosillo, Tijuana, Mexicali, Ciudad Juárez and Chihuahua have continued to prosper, resulting in a signifi-cant migration of chilangos to good jobs or, as Mr. Teheran puts it, "an invasion more

On another level, disdain for chilangos can be seen as a protest against the capital's dominance of Mexican life. As natives of a scat of government that is often regarded as both indifferent to local concerns and fiving off the wealth generated in the interior, chilangos often become the scapegoat of a deep but undifferentiated rage.

For that reason, politicians running for state and national office are careful to avoid the taint that can arise from being labeled a chilango. President-elect Carlos Salinas de Gortani, for instance, was born and educated in Mexico City, but campaigned as a son of the northern state of Nuevo León, where his parents were born and where his family has deep roots.

The cultural and social differences also appear to play a part in fomenting the bostility felt toward people from Mexico City. Chilangos speak differently, eat differently, drive their cars differently, and grow up with a different ontlook on the world, most Mexicans from both groups agree.

"People from the capital are accustomed to making their way in a more competitive environment," said Gregorio Meraz, oews direc-tor at a Tijuana television station, "so they adopt a more hostile attitude, whereas people from the interior are used to a more tranquil environment,"

"When they see a chilango ignoring pedestrian crosswalks and traffic rules, the reaction is one of rejection," he said.

He recalled that when he arrived in Tijuana from Mexico City in February, "there was a lot of skepticism about me, a lot of people wondering if this chilango was going to throw his weight around."

But he said that when "word got around that I was really from Durango, it opened things up for me."

J.S. Wright, Ordered Integration, Dies

By Marjorie Hunter New York Times Service

NEW YORK - J. Skelly Wright, 77, who played an important role in promoting racial deseg-regation in a long career as a federal judge, died of prostate cancer Saturday at his home in Westmoreland Hills, Maryland.

Judge Wright was considered one of the most liberal judges in the U.S. court system. He was also regarded by many Southern whites as a traitor to his class.

Io the months after his order to integrate the public schools in his native New Orleans in 1960, he was shunned by old friends. In the end, Judge Wright had his way, hringing about not only the integration of the public schools in New Orleans hul also the integration of universities, buses, parks, sporting events and voting lists, historic actions that reverberated elsewhere in the South.

N OTHING IS SO POWERFUL AS AN IDEA

THE 1992 FU

"1992" symbolises the process, now being energet- 1 ically pursued by the Member States, of creating a truly open and integrated market within the EC. Border controls, excise duty and VAT anomalies, differences in product labelling standards - all are targeted to be swept away to create the reality of a single market of 330 million people.

Benefits to companies in the UK and throughout Europe will be substantial. They will include:

- Achievement of higher profits and return on capital through economies of scale.
- Expansion for strong, growth-orientated EC companies via acquisition of weaker ones (with benefit to shareholders in both).
- Access to Europe-wide public sector contracts in fields such as telecommunications equipment, through harmonisation of Member government purchasing procedures.
- Free marketing of highly-developed financial services across the whole population of the EC.
- The chance to build Europe-wide brands in food, beverage and toiletries markets.
- The security of a strong, unified home market from which companies can compete across the world on advantageous terms.

Poor Man's Atomic Bomb

The world should be outraged. Yet Iraq has suffered only ritual criticism for the first sustained use of poison gas since World War L A recent United Nations report confirms that Iraq made mustard gas, cyanide and probably nerve gas into standard battlefield weapons.

This systematic violation of the 1925 ban on the use of chemical weapons has provoked astonishingly little horror, perhaps because the world bas so little use for Iran, Iraq's foe. But the ban cannot long survive international indifference. If Iraq is seen to have used chemical weapons to military advantage at no cost to its internadonal standing and support, this poor man's atomic bomh will look attractive indeed to many n Third World nation.

How, beyond indignation, might the world respond? It could enforce the existing ban - and that is a task for the United Nations. An offender might be heavily fined or required to pay an indemnity to the vicum state. One way or another, strong international laws deserve enforcing.

The existing ban on use could be extended into a ban on possession. Debate over that has dragged on for two decades and now proceeds in a 40-nation forum in Geneva. Last summer these talks suddenly came alive when the Soviet Union accepted the U.S. position on inspections. The Russians have opened a plant to negotiators. The United States just last week revealed the location of its five plants.

That is all well and good in bilateral terms. But in the 40-nation negotiations, the Soviet initiative has only dramatized the complexity of verifying a ban on weapons that are so easily and cheaply produced. When any pesticide factory can be turned to chemical weapons production, is complete verification achievable? Would it suffice to achieve something lesser but practical, based on con-fidence-building measures like visus by military teams to production sites?

While such questions go unanswered, the momentum created by the dramatic Soviet step is lost. Also lost for now, because of last week's presidential veto, is $6.8 million that Congress put in the defense authorization bill for research on chemical-weapons verification, which could have helped provide the breakthrough the talks need.

When the chemical weapon - "that hellish poison," Churchill called it - was introduced in World War L it aroused universal revulsion. The seared eyes, scorched throais and agonizing deaths impelled the belligerents to ban poison gas as justly condemned" by civilized nacions. Not even World War II's most desperate moments forced violations of the ban. The world saw no sustained use until that begun by Iraq in 1983.

When negotiations to ban possession bean, five states had chemical weapons. Now the Pentagon cites 20. Last year, America ended a 20-year moratorium and resumed producing ehemical weapons. And Iraq has brought back the horrors that so moved the original negodators. Civilized people revile chemical warfare; civilized countries have to hold this line against inhumanity.

America's Health-Care Gap

any other country, their health, measured in the broad terms of life span and deatb rates, is not outstanding. ft ranks somewhere around average among the world's industrial democracies. By one extremely important test, infant mortality, it is far below average. Some of the reasons for this mediocre showing bave to do with the ways Americans eat, drink, use drugs, drive and, in general, choose to live. But some have a great deal to do with necess to medical care.

The United States needs a system of universal necess at least to basic care. That is going to be a compelling responsibility of the next president. The questions of how to provide access for everyone and how to pay for it are dauntingly difficult. But not many Americans like the idea that ambulances are sometimes turned away from bospitals because the person on the stretcher has no insurance card, or that a pregnant woman sometimes cannot get prenatal care because she does not have enough ready cash for the doctor's fee. These incideats are becoming more common.

The number of Americans with no health insurance has risen over the past decade. Why? Manufacturing industry, in which fringe benefits are standard, has reduced its employment by more than a million jobs since 1980: the growth in employment is in the service industries, in which employers often do not provide health coverage. Another cause has been inflation. While Medicaid covers people on welfare, state gov-

While Americans spend more of their income on health care than the people of any other country, their health, measured in The result is that Medicaid now covers fewer than half of the people whose incomes are below the poverty line.

But hy no means all of the uninsured are destitute. Of the 37 million with no bealth insurance, a third are children - but of the adults, fully 60 percent are employed. The typical uninsured family includes someone working full-time but never with enough money for visits to the doctor.

To cover those people, one possibility is to take the two existing systems - private insurance through employment and Medicaid for the poor - and extend them until they meet. That is essentially what Massachusetts has done under Governor Michael Dukakis. The disadvantage with that strategy is that requiring companies to provide wider benefits would drive up labor costs and generate unemployment. An alternative might be to require for uninsured workers n mandatory deduction from their pay, like the one for Social Security, sufficient to buy basic coverage. Any solution that works is going to cost a lot of money, and that cost will cause pain to the people who pay it. But perhaps there is one more thing that can be said. What kind of a country do Americans want to live in? Not many, we think, will be comfortable with a system in which most people get the best medical care in the world simply by showing a card while some, including 12 million children, have no claim on any medical care at all.

After Hussein's Shock Treatment, a Chance for Progress

WASHINGTON - King Hus-sein's recent move to extricate Jordan from the West Bank is no ploy. It is a strategic step that may prove to be a turning point in the history of Middle Eastern politics. With Jordan removed as a putative spokesman for the Palestinians, Israel must face reality and sooner or later deal directly with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Israel can Hussein's frustrations were a long time in building. As the Arab-Israeli conflict dragged on, the king was disappointed by the way he was treated by all sides: the Americans, the Israelis, the PLO and the Arab states. Time to Put Aside These Illusions now have to cat their words.

By Anthony Lewis

BOSTON — The conflict between Israelis and Palestinians, defying solution for 40 years now, has its hasis in a difficult reality: the attachment of both peoples to the same piece of territory. But compromise might have been possible if vision had not been obscured on all sides by illusions.

Palestinians, many of them, harbored the illusion that Israel could be made to disappear. Their voice, the Palestine Liberation Organization, fostered that notion by calling in its cove-nant for n new state including all of Palestine. Various elements in the PLO thought they could undermine fsrnel by military force and terrorism: another illusion.

The Israeli illusion was that, in Golda Meir's phrase, there were no Palestinians. They were just indistinguishable Arabs, who ought to be welcomed by existing Arab states. Or, in a version of this illusion, they should find their national idenoity in Jordan, already n Palestinian state.

Reality has long since overwhelmed such illusions, fsrael, the greatest military power in the region, is not going to be defeated by physical force. The Palestinians have as strong a sense of nntlonhood as Israelis or other people, and they want their own home and flag and government.

King Hussein of Jordan dramatically underlined the Palestinian reality when he gave up his elaim to sovereignty over the West Bank. The eight-month uprising in the West Bank and Gaza had shown beyond doubt that Palestinians want their own state. Let them find it, Hussein said, under the PLO's leadership. The king's speech was a devastating blow to so many illusions. There was the Israeli Labor Party's absurd belief in what it calls "the Jordanian option," the idea that it could reach a territorial compromise on the West Bank with Hussein. And there was the related U.S. view that the PLO can be excluded from the peace process hy hav-ing a few approved Palestinians represent their people in the king's delegation. But how bard illusions die. They are comfortable. They keep people from having to face diffi-culties. And so, in the days after Hussein's speech, American and Israeli officials suggested that it really did not change things much. It was only taches, they said; if the king had really meant it, he would have stopped paying West Bank teachers and others. A few days later, he did just that True leadership now would reize the moment of King Hussein's decision to call for an end of illusions. That leadership is required from the PLO, Israel and the United States. The PLO has already moved some distance toward reality. Despite the rhetoric of the cove-nant, many Palestinians see Israel as a fact of life and are ready to accept a Palestinian state restricted to the West Bank and Gaza. In June, Bassam Abu Sharif, an adviser to Yasser Arafat, called for such a two-state solution and for peace.

But there are maximalist forces in the PLO, and they denounced Mr. Abu Sharif, Mr. Arafat bas kept the balance over many years by avoiding clarity. Will he now move decisively toward a peaceful solution? The planned meeting of the PLO's top policy-making body, the Palestine National Council, could tell much.

Some outsiders said Hussein's decision put the PLO to the test of governance. It had to demon-strate, they argued, that it could substitute for Jordan in supplying services and funds to the people of the West Bank. That view is unreal. fsrael would not countenance the PLO stepping into Jordan's role in the West Bank, issuing passports and paying teachers. The occupation authorities sternly suppress any expression of Palestinian nationalism. Israel has made it a crime for any Israeli to talk with PLO officials. On July 27, Faisal Husseini, a leading Palestin-ian, spoke in Jerusalem to a largely Jewish audi-rightist Likud Party. Now he spoke out publicly for a two-state solution. Four days later - the day of King Hussein's speech - Israel arrested Mr. Husseini as a PLO supporter and put him in detention without trial for six months. Jailing suspicions that be continued to har-bor ambiuons on the West Bank — led nowhere. But he will proceed cau-tioucly avoiding drastic measures become more Jordanian.

The king has also shown other Arab leaders how shortsighted they have been to support the PLO in all disputes between the PLO and Jordan in recent years. Thus by contractdan in recent years. Thus by contract-ing his responsibilities, the king has enhanced his stature. Hussein will still be part of the process — and his band may, in fact, be streagthened. But he will no longer act as a shield between Israel and the Palestinians. True, Hussein hates the PLO and is not easer to see the stiabiling ments is not eager to see the establishment of a Palestiman state. Yet he loathes even Palestinian state. Yet he toather even more the idea of Israel annexing the West Bank, even if only de facto. He a believes that Israel, to prevent its own demographic suicide, would then have no alternative but to capel the park inians from the West Bank, as the tinians from the West Bank, as the extreme right in Israel is now using The expellees would flood Jardan and radicalize the Middle East, threaten-ing the Hashemite regime in Jordan. Thus Jordan's first priority is to prevent Israeli annexation. This issue tablishment of a Palestinian state on the West Bank holds risks for a Hash-emite Jordan, yet they are small com-pared to the dangers of Israeli annex-ation. Policy is never a choice between good and bad, but between bad and worse. Japan's Second Coming Stirs Admiration, and Loathing, in Asia

KYOTO, Japan — My feelings toward the Japanese oscillate from affection for the many friends I have made the last 30 years, to admi-ration for Japanese activements, to loathing and apprehension over the manner with which the Japanese re-moderate their policies.

An Obligation to Consult

There was a dispute last week when word got out that President Reagan had authorized new covert actions to oust Panama's strongman, General Manuel Antonio Noriega. Legislators accused the executive of initiating or expediting the leak --- ostensibly either to make it look as though the Reagan administration were making headway in its campaign against General Noriega or to undermine a pending bill that would change the terms of executive notice to Congress of covert operations. The president suggested with some asperity that once again Congress had shown it cannot keep a secret. It was a vivid illustration of how fragile are the understandings between the branches in this most sensitive area of the secret use of power. Even without this latest exchange, bowever, there has been rising dissatisfaction in Congress with the old terms of executive notice. Since 1980, the president has been required to notify the two intelligence committees of covert operations "in a timely fashion." The purpose was to guarantee that the executive branch gave its own careful consideration to such inherently delicate activities and that it had available the presumably detached but responsible judg-ment of the legislature. This was the kind of notification under way in the Noriega case. In the Iran-contra affair, however, the White House sent the required notice al-most a year after the fact, claiming that this was "timely." Congress responded with a bill to require notice in advance or. "on rare occasions when time is of the essence, within 48 bours. This bill passed the Senate last March on a 71-to-19 vote and is expected to come before the full House of Representatives later in this session.

The bill should be approved. It breaks no new ground; it simply clarifies the executive's obligation to consult. There is little public debate in the United States now about planned covert actions: A need for them in certain circumstances is broadly accepted. An important reason why they are accepted, however, is the notice provi-sion ensuring a timely congressional testing of their worth. President Reagan himself has said that before undertaking covert ac-tion, policy makers should consider whether there would be a consensus in support of the plan if it were revealed to the public. Elected officials — even a select group of them — can provide a president with useful information on what the public would find acceptable. It should be welcome to a president, moreover, that properly informed legislators would also share the responsibility --and the polidcal heat if things went wrong, - THE WASHINGTON POST.

Gulf War and World Peace

The pbony peace is over and real peace seems about to hreak out in the Gulf. The fact that the war is ending with neither side as the victor is also hopeful for world peace. The lesson that war does not pay will not be lost on future would-be aggressors. Because both sides remain in possession of virtually the same territory as when the war began, there is little incentive for either to start fighting again or to ignore the cease-fire date.

Hanoi's Callousness Shows

Hanoi last week decided it would not cooperate to look for the remains of Americans missing in action in Indochina or to help the emigration of former Vietnamese political prisoners to the United States. The fig leaf of an excuse cited is not big enough to hide the callousness in using the remains of soldiers to extract political concessions. Hanoi's larger aim is to force the pace toward normalization of relations. This obscene manipulation must not be allowed to succeed. - The Straits Times (Singapore).

into a single political community. Pyongyang dismissed Mr. Roh's re-loathing and apprehension over the manner with which the Japanese re-gard countries like mine. Maybe they cannot help themselves. On Saturday the Japanese marked with great solemnity the atomie bombing of Hiroshima. While we pray that the likes of Hiroshima will never be repeated, we should not be deluded into thinking that the Japanese were the tragic victims of World War II. They certainly were not. Many Japa-nese have told me that they were glad Japan lost the war so they could attain their giddy prosperity of today.

We must not forget that the atom bornb shortened the war and saved millions of lives. For all its wailing, Japan did not have to contend with Soviet occupation. It was right that the night after President Harry Truman ordered the atomic bombing of Hiro-I can only hring to mind what it was like in the Philippines during the war. There were some Filipinos who had welcomed the Japanese, thinking that perhaps an Asian nation would end our humiliaong domination by the West. As it turned out, the three years part of the world - the second com-ing - using trade and aid. They are convinced that our part of the world is the next growth area, that they will dominate it. Behind this supreme self-confidence is their belief that the United States is on the decline.

The United States can take care of its problems with Japan. I do not think it is on a decline - not with its vast resources, its domestic strength and its great capacity for creativity and renewal. But what are we in Southeast Asia to do?

I think we must confront this second coming and realize fully what the Japanese are. Japan can well be the riehest country in the world but it also wants to be the most powerful. It aims to do this through intransigent commerce. A visit to any Southeast Asian capital illustrates how pervasive the Japanese presence is: cars in the streets, appliances in the home, glittering neon advertising "made in Japan," even the special brothels that caler only to the Japanese.

For the Koreas, Modest Hope Is in Order

political advantage, which seems most likely, or whether a new opportunity for easing tension on the pen-insula and for relations between the two Koreas may he on the horizon. The North is frustrated by the steady growth in economic strength.

political confidence and military power of the South. Its friends are distancing themselves from its policies. taking part in the Olympic Games and seeking economic openings to Seoul. The only cards in its hand are the South Korean desire for reunification, anti-Americanism in the South over trade and political issues, and the threat of violence. Pyongyang has tried to use all three in the past year - evidently conspiring in the destruction of a Korean Air Line plane last November and encouraging both anti-American demonstradons by students and meetings between North and South Korean students at the demilitarized zone.

In June and July. Seoul fired n barrage of proposals of its own, calling for trade exchanges, soccer matches and family reunions. Most important was President Roh Tae Woo's announcement July 7 that henceforth Seoul would not treat Pyongyang as an encmy and would help it gain trade and diplomatic relations with Japan, the United States and other Western countries, halt anti-North Korean propaganda, encourage participation in international organizations, and work toward reintegrating North and South marks hut in reality seemed stunned by the breadth of the proposal and its support by most opposition party leaders in the South. It immediately groped to recover the initiative. Having for months refused all official messages from the South, it acknowledged a letter from the speaker of the South Korean Assembly urging North Kore-an participation in the Olympics. Pyongyang's response was a strikingly nonpolemical proposal. It revived the idea of a meeting of the parliaments of the two Koreas in Pyongyang this month. The key agenda item would be n nonaggression agreement. The South responded with a guard-ed and uneasy "yes," hut understand-ably insisted that no meeting that large and complex could he orga-nized in a few weeks. Pyongyang might still agree to some compromise. At least the ball is in play. Seoul's immediate objectives are clear: to ease tensions before the Olympics and fears of disturbances during the Games. Any dialogue with the North could contribute to this. There are also strong domestic pressures for creative efforts toward reunification. For Mr. Roh, his new policy is a major effort to build domestic political support, particularly given his Justice Party's minority position in the National Assembly, Finally, the South hopes to give Moscow and Beijing both actively seeking to broaden their ties with South Korea but still coninge moderation on the North. Moscow and Beijing have warned ed this to the Los Angeles Times.

Japan's polluting industries are being exported so that Japan will be free from the toxins of industrialization. It should be obvious that Japan acts not on the basis of humanist principles but on the basis of its self-interest, its cuphonic narcissism. It is a massive vacuum cleaner that is sweeping through Southeast Asia and woe to us who are not moored securely to nationalistic ideals and self-determination. for we will be sucked away.

It is, of course, possible that the Japanese are changing, and we should be glad that their assistance to the region has increased. It is also worth noting that Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita's first trip outside Inpan last year was to Manila during the meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations - and not to Washington, as has been the case with every other new Japanese prime minister.

But nre the Japanese really ehang-ing? Are they about to internationalize and fulfill their obligations as a rich trading nation? The Japanese

Pyongyang not to count on their sup-port if it starts a war or initiates terrorism during the Olympics. Both hope to open unofficial trade offices in Secul soon, and China's commerce with the South already far exceeds its com-merce with North Korea.

Some observers sense a desperate desire on the part of some officials in the North to open their society politi-cally and economically. It is hard to see how Kim II Sung and his son and heir npparent, Kim Jong II, can retain their iron control of policy and yet open the door to the outside. Nor until recently have statements from Pyongyang offered any encouragement. The odds still favor the North as playing only for tactical advan-tage, not for serious negotiations. The United States is right to support the South's initiatives. Washington is ready to renew efforts at a political and economic dialogue with the North itself after the Olympics. A call for U.S. congressional North Korean parliamentary meetings communicated by Pyongyang in late July is consistent with Seoul's own policy and can be welcomed in principle.

There are many ways Pyongyang could show its seriousness. A peaceful Olympics is one: the beginning of serious North-South talks is another. But neither Washington nor Seoul can forget that the Korean War be-gan in 1950 while talks were under way between North and South Korea. It is much too early for cheering. but not for modest hopes.

that foreigners do not understand them. Invariably they misread others because their island culture and parcissism have insulated them.

And yet they are perhaps the best informed people anywhere. Japan's three major newspapers, with a com-bined circulation of more than 30 million, have reported on how the poor in Southeast Asia live and how Japanese businessmen have behaved arrogantly in these countries.

When they are on top, they can be merciless. The kidnapping of a Japa-nese businessman in the Philippines last year illustrates how high-handed they can be when dealing with people they regard as inferiors. Had the Phil-ippines been a Middle Eastern country on which they are dependent for oil, they would have behaved more circumspectly. Instead, they withheld aid to the troubled Aquino government, played the Filipinos in their media as barbarians who condoned kidnapping and made the Philippines off-limits to their tourists and investors.

Worse than economie transgression or the arrogance of Japanese compa-nies, two generations of Japanese children have been kept ignorant of their recent history. In rewning their histo-ry books, the Japanese call their country's aggression in Asia an "advance." In May, a member of the cabinet, Seisuke Okuno, head of the National Land Agency, justified Japan's inva-sion of China, its atrocities, without any reprimand from the prime minis-ter. It matters not that he resigned; many Japanese supported him in letters to the newspapers and in rallies. The Japanese have no sense of guilt about their depredations. This is ex-plainable. Traditionally and ideologically, they rejected Asia a long time ago. Thus, Emperor Hirohito has trip to Southeast Asia. Given these facts about Japan, what are we in the Philippines and in Southeast Asia to do? First, we must not forget the logic of trade: The Japanese will take ad-vantage of the weak. It is imperative for us to build strong societies so that we will not be sucked away. We must also continually remind the Japanese ; of what they did during the war and should not be deluded about their weeping over Hiroshima. But while we must not forget the past, we must transcend its angers and hatreds and establish more links with them, particularly the few who share; our feeble hopes and who are anguished at the lack of responsibility of their leaders to our part of the world, which has helped them prosper.

And most of all, we should learn from the Japanese. If, in their fear of the West, they were challenged to build a strong, modern nation, so too-must we build strong societies. We bave to learn from them - how to make do with limited resources, discipline our flaws, develop craftsman-ship and, above all, be prepared-to pay the cost of national integrity. It is nor Confucianism that has made the Japanese a prosperous nation. Their pragmatism, their work ethic and harsh history and environment has tempered them. Until the time when we in Southeast Asia are disciplined and truly nationalistic, then the Japanese vacuum cleaner will surely be our fate.

The Jordan Option Is Dead But Another Has Been Born

By Charles Krauthammer

WASHINGTON — The Jordan op-tion, the mirage which has mes-merized U.S. and Israeli policymakers for 20 years, vanished when King Hus-sein of Jordan announced that he was washing his hands of the West Bank and turning responsibility for running and recovering it to the PLO. The mirage was that King Hussein

The mirage was that King Hussein would negotiate a West Bank peace with Israel. Ever since 1967, Israelis and Americans have been concocting schemes under which Jordan could re-claim parts or all of the West Bank in return for a final peace in the Middle East. From the Allon Plan on, lines kept being drawn on West Bank maps, twist-ed, convoluted lines, often adorned with dots and curbcues, lines that would con-stitute the new and final border between Israel and Jordan. No matter what was devised to please the king, he found a reason every time to equivocate.

It is hard to blame him, considering what happened to the two Arab leaders who were prepared to make peace with who were prepared to make peace with Israel: Anwar Sadat of Egypt and King Abdullah. of Jordan, King Hussein's grandfather and predecessor. But if it was unsporting to blame King Hussein for not wanting to risk death at the hands of Arab assassins, it was foolish to simultaneously count on him to make peace.

A second, more sophisticated Jordan option evolved during the 1980s. Israel and Jordan would not divide the West Bank. They would share it. A kind of joint sovereignty was in fact evolving: Israel and Jordan were developing, without benefit of a treaty or announcement. a regime of shared powers, Jordan's support of 13,000 West Bank civil servants and its West Bank Development Plan; both now abruptly terminated by King Hussein, were symbols of the condominium and portents of the future.

The idea might have worked except for or to the ex one detail. The West Bankers, the people it was designed for, rejected it. They did not want to be ruled by Israel and many 220000 wanted even less to be ruled by Jordan. The intifada, the Palestinian uprising 1.14 now eight months old, has been a referendum on condominium. King Hussen lost, He has now correctly read the re-sults, abdicated the West Bank, and pro-nounced the Jordan option dead.

Friends of the Jordan option are reluc-tant to accept the coroner's report. The U.S. State Department and the Israeli Labor Party, for example, have invested much in the idea of an international peace conference whose foundation is a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation negotiating for the West Bank. They are oow bravely trying to pretend that the king's abdication, which kills that idea, was simply a tactical maneuver. Under this view, King Hussein is set-ting the Palestine Liberation Organiza-tion up for a fall: He codes the West Bank to it, the PLO cannot deliver, the West Bankers come crawling back to him. Even assuming that is the king's calculation, it assuming that is the king's calculation, it will not work. The PLO has oever in its history delivered, and the West Bankers have never seemed to mind. In the explo-ria of the intifada, they are apt to mind even less. King Hussein has given up the West Bank for the last time. Which leaves only two possibilities for peace. First, that a generation of Palestinian leaders arises, truly prepared to accept Israel and to negotiate terms of mutual coexistence. The other possibility is the one King

Hussein fears most. In his speech, he deeded the West Bank to the PLO, which he recognized as the "sole legitimate rep-resentative of the Palestinian people." But two-thirds of Hussein's own Jordanian subjects are Palestinians. If the PLO truly is their sole legitimate representative, then Yasser Arafat and not King Hussein should be ruling in Amman.

Hence the king's warung: "It has to be understood in all clarity and without any ambiguity or equivoccoon that our measures regarding the West Bank concern only the occupied Palestinian land and its people and do not relate in any way to the Jordanian citizens of Palestinian origin in the Hashemite kingdom of Jordan." Pal-estinians in Jordan had better realize that he is their sole legitimate representative. To enforce this, peculiarly one-sided view of Palestinian representation, the king keeps a very efficient secret police. He needs it. If he is advising the Palestinians of the West Bank to seek self-determination, why should the Palestinians of the East Bank (Jordan) oot do the same? Why not indeed. Were the majority to take control of Jordan, an avenue to peace might open. Palestinians would have a country, a flag, a passport, the dignity that comes from self-government - and sovereignty over 77 percent of Mandatory Palestine. A Palestine with its capital in Amman and an Israel with its capital in Jerusalem would still have the West Bank to quarrel about. But it would be a territorial dispute between two countries, not a fight about existence between two mutually exclusive nationalisms. King Hussein has closed all existing Jordan options. But he may have created a new one. It is full of risk. It is also full of promise, though not for its creator. .. Washington Post Writers Group.

The Piazza Should Be Red In Florence, Piazza della Signoria and the famous cupola of the Cathedral of Santa Maria del Fiore were conceived only a few years apart: the piazza in 1396 and the dome in 1418. The piazza was divided by stone into rectangular sections, with the stone framing red bricks that were arranged in a herringbone pattern. On the dome, also, are red tiles, supported by white marble elements.

For more than three centuries the piazza and the dome existed in harmony. Then, in 1795, the Grand Duke Ferdioand III of Hapsburg-Lorraine, who ruled Tuscany at the time, decided to replace the brick pavement with stone, since part of the bricks had been damaged by a oew invention: the use of iron rims on carriage wheels.

In 1982, it was decided to dig up a portion of the piazza to start an archaeological search. The digging continues, and there have been heated discussions in Florence on how the piazza should be repayed when it is finished. In a referendum in 1983, the citizens of Florence expressed their wish for the piazza to be restored to its ancient red splendor. Yet, despite the fact that traffic now moves on rubber tires and that most of the area is off-limits to traffic, despite an offer by the brickmakers of Impruneta to donate bricks made in the 14th-century fashion to pave the piazza, and despite the opposition of the Christian Democrats and other opposition parties, the Communists have decided to pave the piazza with stone.

Sean Carroll's Tragedy

Also, the configuration of the AEC Mark-3 bus driven by Mr. Carroll for 25 years, start-ing in 1953, is such that the driver sits in a separate compartment, isolated from the passengers. A Question of Loyalty

T HE FBI arrested my father the night of Pearl Harbor, his pro-Jap-anese sentiments were well known. As I saw it, he was arrested because he loved Japan and wanted Japan to win the war. At the very least, he did not want Japan to lose. Did that make him disloyal to America? It probably did.

In camp, we saw war movies that showed Japanese pilots laughing as they American Citizens League, whose offi-cers, speaking for "all" nisei and their machine-gunned American pilots parachuting out of their burning planes. We parents, agreed to the evacuation as a demonstration of loyalty to the United States. Never mind that it was a violation saw Japanese soldiers bayoneting wounded GIs. And when the marines finally came and killed the Japanese, my friends and I cheered, But I felt badly about it. Perhaps if I were truly a loyal American I would not have had any quaims. After the war, people used to ask me if I was angry or bitter about the internment. I vid Lore neither I could can melin of the U.S. Constitution, waived by an executive order of the president. But the $20,000 is another matter. It has been said, and correctly, at various times during the lengthy debate that no amount of money could compensate for a violation of civil liberties and human said I was neither; I could oot explain. When my father was arrested, I thought I did not want to see him again. The government did not ask me to dis-own my father, but it was my impression rights on this scale. But even in these days of inflated salaries for athletes, entertainers and business executives, it is enough to pose a temptation. For Women, Stratford Is the Thing

By Mel Gussow speare Company debut with her stunning production of "Titus Andronicus" starring Brian Cox. That production has since moved to The Pit theater in the company's London bome, the Barbican.

Warner, founder of the Kick Theater Company, has followed up that initial success with her Stratford production of "King John," once again demonstrating her abili-ty to vivify one of Shakespeare's esser works.

At the same time this season, Garry Hynes, an Irish director and a co-founder of the Druid Theater in Galway, has made her own Strat-ford debut with "The Man of Mode," an acerbic Restoration comedy by George Etherege.

Di Trevis, by comparison an RSC veteran, offers as her seasonal contribution a mainstage produc-tion of "Much Ado About Nothing." Trevis's exuberant revival of "The Revenger's Tragedy" recently completed its engagement in The Pit, where it ran along with Warner's "Titus Andronicus."

The three are on the crest of a wave of women directors. Sarah Pia Anderson also directs for the RSC and Janice Honeyman bas just staged Athol Fugard's "Hello and Goodbye" in a special RSC col-laboration with the Almeida Theater. This season two first-rank British actresses, Judi Dencb and Geraldine McEwan, directed Shakespeare plays for Kenneth Branagh's Renaissance Theater, and other women are represented at various Fringe theaters.

Of all the Englishwomen, Warner is the one who has made the greatest impact. As demonstrated by both "Titus Andronicus" and "King John," she bas a visceral sense of theatricality. In her hands, plays draw an immediate responsiveness from the audience. With "Titus Andronicus" and "King John," we share the beat and lightning of the performance, and on a summer evening we also share the warmth in the bot-box environment of Stratford's Other Place Theater.

Shakespeare's version of King STRATFORD-UPON-AVON, Service TRATFORD-UPON-AVON, England — Women directors are in the ascendancy at Stratford this season. Last year, Deborah Warner made her Royal Shake-compared directors and the bastard Philip Fault twice, and the bastard Philip Faulconbridge, as played by David Morrissey, is hot-blooded and hotheaded. Usually considered a patriot, Faulconbridge becomes a zealot in this production, shifting his allegiance in order to remain on the firing line.

At the same time, the king still reflects the will of his formidable mother, played by Cherry Morris, and he is antagonistic to Con-stance, portrayed by Susan Engel, mother to his nephew and rival. Arthur, portrayed by Lyndon Davis. As movingly portrayed by En-gel, Constance has a firm dedication to purpose, installing ber son on the throne in place of John.

Engel exudes conviction. Led by Constance, "King John" has more important roles for women than most other, more popular. Shakespearean plays. This may have been one of the attractions of the work for the director, but more than by anything else she seems fascinated by the intricate political canvas. Instead of battle scenes there are repeated peace negotiations. At the brink of war, there is always someone to offer a conciliatory solution, marital or martial. In tation. this sense, the play wears its relevance like a coat of mail. Although nothing can completedisguise the contrivances of the play, the rough-bewn "King John" remains captivating, and the actors throw themselves into the fray, ig-niting the unadorned atmosphere ed by Nicholas Farrell as the rewith panoply and fervor. Warner emphasizes the gamesmanship of the contest — "King John" as pow-the contest and the sum of the sevenger's chief foe, "The Revenger's Tragedy" filled the small RSC the-aters with blind retribution and er play. Stock Scandal Changes Little in Japan

By Susan Chira New York Times Service TOKYO — Takako Doi is taking ber message to the people, but so far. it seems, the people are not listening. For the last few days, Miss Doi, who heads the opposition Socialist Party, bas been standing on street corners and shouting into a micro-phone, calling for a full parliamen-tary investigation into a stock trad-ing scandal that involves some of Japan's most important politicians. But the governing Liberal Democratic Party has staved off demands for a probe of the affair. Despite a barrage of hostile ques-tions in the Diet, Japan's parlia-ment, Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita and Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa - whose aides are involved in the scandal - have refused to make public the names of politicians, journalists, and businessmen who were offered stock in Recruit-Cosmos Co. and made huge profits after the real-estate company's stock went public. Although the trades apparently violated no laws, they have been widely seen as an attempt by Recruit-Cosmos to curry favor with influential politicians and journalists, despite the company's denials. But while the seandal has prompted angry editorials and a flurry of proposals to elamp down on stock-trading abuses, there has been little enduring political fall-out. That is because what the Japanese call "money politics" is a deeply embedded and generally ac-cepted fact of political life here.

Michisada Hirose, a senior editorial writer for the Asahi Shimbun who has often written about the ties between Japan's politicians, businessmen, and journalisis, said "the intimate relationships between business and politicians and the way that businessmen give politicians chances 10 make windfall profits" are aspects of the Recruit-Cosmos case that are "typical."

sidering steps aimed at curbing the worst abuses in stock trading. Among the moves under consideration is a stiffer tax on capital gains made from selling shares pur-chased before a stock is publicly traded

Yet few here believe that any changes will strike at the heart of money politics. Japanese politi-cians rely more on funding from large corporations and less on individual donations than do American politicians, said Gerald L. At the heart of the problem, said Seiichi Tagawa, a legislator and outspoken critic of fund-raising practices here, is the relatively weak sense of voter participation in Japanese politics.

As a result, Japanese politicians have turned to corporations for big donations, and have found ways to get around the existing limit of $750,000 on such donations. Peri-

On Saturdays and Sundays, Barcelooa resideots throng to the beach because it is

In its survey, the European Consumer Union found that Montgat's water was heavily polloted with zinc, cadmium and lead and its coliform bacteria exceeded European Community guidelines.

nity's environmental division. Speaking privately, many Euro-pean officials say Britain is the worst laggard on beach quality. At a conference on the North Sea last year, Britain refused appeals to stop dumping slodge into the sea. In addition, many British envi-ronmentalists say the government is oot doing enough to press local water anthorities to improve sewage treatment systems, which are often little more than outflow pipes dating from Victorian times. "Britain is not doing very well at all," said Anne Scott, a pollution control officer with Marine Conservatioo Society io Britain.

"They've been dragging their feet because they're just oot prepared to make the financial commitment." Cleaning the seas is certainly expensive. West Germany's environment minister, Klaus Topfer, estimates that it will cost $12 billion to save the North Sea. This money would be used for improved pollution control equipment for industry and improved filtering of sewage. Algae often grow to excess be-country and we can't depend of Danish scientists have tangled with West German scientists and officials about the cause of the seal deaths.

Bjorn Clausen, a Danish seal expert, said a virus was responsible and that he doubted pollutioo had anything to do with the deaths. But Bernd Heydemann, the environ-mental minister for Schleswig-Holstein, the state in oorthern West Germany where more than 1,000 dead seals have been found, disagreed.

"A principal cause of their deaths is industrial pollution," Mr. Heydemann said. "The immune system of the seals has been injured in a very serious way."

Mr. Bush, who will formally receive the Republican Party's nomination at the convention here, which opens on Monday, told the the party's platform committee that the Democrats "deceived" the public at their convention in Atlanta in July. "They spoke in glittering generalities and comfortable code words but said nothing specific about how they would govern," Mr. Bush said.

INTERNATIONAL STOCK MARKETS

Trance's Second Marché Makes Striking Comeback

By JACQUES NEHER Special to the Herald Tribune

ARIS - France's S-year-old Second Marché, the second-And six regional markets have recovered a good measure of lost ground and the pace of new issues is picking up as well.

But with the turnaround has come a new sense of reality about the risks and rewards of France's secondary stock markets. The continuing hazards of low liquidity have helped bring high-flying price/earning ratios of a year

As of Friday, the Second Marché index had bounced back to 169.60, a 31 percent gain since the beginning of 1988, when it registered 129. P/E ratios among the smaller companies are For all its progress, however, the index remains 36 percent 'more realistic now.'

below April 1987, when it reg-istered its all-time high of 264. The index, calculated each Friday, was calibrated at 100 at the start of 1985.

Analysts and market participants have mixed views about the secondary market's short-term growth, but they have no illusions

Paris brokerage Legrand-Legrand, was less enthusiastic. "The recovery was very good, and I think these stocks are now generally at their right price," he said. "I'm not buying the Second Marché now."

The Second Marche has maintained almost the same pace as France's largest blue-chip shares. Since the start of the year, the official Reglement Mensuel trend index has risen 31 percent.

"You can't separate the Second Marché from the main mar-ket," said Mr. de Salaberry. "They move together, though the Second Marché is more volatile than the main market."

HE SECOND Marché, with a total market capitalization of 134.39 billioo francs ($21 billion) at the end of June, has grown to 12.6 percent of the capitalization of the official market, which was 1.06 trillion francs at the end of the first half. While they move together, different forces will tend to animate them in the coming months, Mr. de Salaberry predicted. The general market, he said, will be pushed by a 12 to 15 percent growth in 1988 French corporate earnings.

The main market, he said, will also be stimulated by government moves to realign the core shareholdings of recently privatized French companies.

Takeovers and takeover speculation also are expected to con-tinue affecting the main market, as they did through the first half in connection with Martell & Compagnie, Benedictine SA, Moët Hennessy-Louis Vuitton and Telémécanique SA.

There has been little takeover action on the Second Marche, however, and little is foreseen, because the amount of stock in free-float is usually too small to make a company vulnerable. To be listed on the Second Marché, a company is required to issue a - minimum of only 10 percent of its capital. Few issue much - beyond 25 percent.

The Second Marché, analysts said, will get its prime stimulus this year from corporate carnings, which are expected to be up -around 15 to 18 percent, bearing the carnings growth of the larger companies on the main market. First-balf financial reports are due out in Sentember.

"The P/Es are more realistic now," Mr. de Salaberry said. "The

Inter-Con Hotels Put On Block Grand Met to Seek

About £1.5 Billion

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches LONDON — Grand Metropoli-tan PLC, the diversified food and beverages concern, 'said Monday that it had put its Inter-Continental Hards Compiled in the formed and Hotels Corp. subsidiary up for sale at a minimum price of about £1.5 billion ($2.54 billion).

Analysts said the announcement, which caught markets by surprise, could signal Grand Met's intention to take a long-rumored run at Cad-bury-Schweppes PLC, the candy-maker and drinks company.

Inter-Continental, which repre-sents 6 percent of Grand Met's overall trading profit, was acquired from Pan American World Air-ways in 1981 for $500 million. The internationally known chain includes 100 hotels with more than 37,000 rooms in 47 couotries. Twenty of the 100 hotels are fully owned by Grand Metropolitan while the remainder are managed by the company on an equity basis. Although the company did not give an asking price for the unit, Ian Martin, chairman of its U.S. subsidiary, said the chain is worth £1.5 billion.

"Anything less than £1.5 billion would be unlikely to do it," Mr. Martin said in New York, referring to a potential sale.

The company said Monday that it had received expressions of inter-est in the hotel unit from several interested parties, but did oot elab-orate. In 1986, Grand Met rejected a $900 million offer by Trafalgar Holdings Ltd. of Los Angeles for Inter-Continental.

The stock market reacted favorably to the announcement. Grand Met's shares rose 25 pence to 521 pence. They traded as high as 526 pence during the session. Cadbury-Schweppes closed 7 pence higher, an 385

Grand Met said in a statement that Inter-Continental had increased dramatically in value during the last few years.

Allen Sheppard, Grand Met chairman and chief executive, said, "We have achieved a substantial immaround in the performance of Inter-Cootinental. In the 12 months to March 31, 1988, tradingprofit increased by 52 percent." For the year to Sept. 30, 1987, the company's last full fiscal year, Inter-Continental trading profit rose 25 percent, to £37.9 million

Saurer, which is controlled by Tito Tettamanti, a Swiss financier, said La Suisse had accepted the second-best offer by opting for the bid from Swiss Life, Switzerland's largest insurer. Saurer's bid totaled million francs. Many analysts and investors, however, expect the Suisse takeover battle to be only the forerunner of a general industry consolidation. "People on the bourse bave realized that insurance shares are undervalued," said Bruno Hauser, an analyst at Bank J. Vontobel. Many shares in the sector had already started to climb in the first rection will be more enhanced by half of the year, but the biggest jump in prices has come in the last three weeks, since the battle began is widely believed to be Allianz AG of West Germany. As of last Friday, registered shares of small or medium insurers showed the following rises since July 15: La Suisse, 79 percent; La Genevoise, 56 percent; Berner All-gemeine Versicherungsgesellschaft, percent; National, 35 percent; Baloise Insurance Co., 14 percent; Helvetia Accident Swiss Insurance Co., 11 percent, and La Neuchateloise, 11 percent. In contrast, shares in Zurich Insurance and Swiss Reinsprance, two large insurers, rose only about 3 percent each over the same period. The Crédit Suisse market index rose 2 percent.

Analysts said most Swiss insurers are undervalued due to their conservative accounting practices. large hidden reserves that are unreflected in share prices, and low dividends. Companies also tend to understate profits, settiog aside unnecessarily high provisions to cover possible risks, the analysts

Swiss insurers benefit from the fact that the Swiss spend 16 percent of their income on insurance, and pay the highest premiums in the world, With annual insurance pre-miums of $1,747 per capita in 1986, the Swiss were ahead of Americans ($1,536) and Japanese ($1,399), a Zurich Cantonal Bank report said last week

Prospects differ about prospects for further takeovers.

Mr. Kaufmann said be considers Helvetia Accident and Baloise the likeliest candidates for takeover attempts.

Helvetia said it plans to separate its accident and fire-insurance units at the end of the year, and Mr. Kaufmann said each of the two separately quoted compaoies would be easier to take over than the existing single concern. He also said Baloise, which was the subject of takeover numors carly this year, could be taken over if a percent stake held by Swiss Bank Corp. was sold and the purchaser was able to accumulate a majority of shares.

Meinrad Gyr, an analyst at Crédit Suisse, said Berner Allge-meine might be the most vulnerable to takeover, since its shares were widely dispersed.

Mr. Hauser said insurance shares may have reacted too sharp-ly to the La Suisse hattle.

Mr. Gyr said prices were being driven by pure speculation. "Takeovers are not as likely as many people imagine," be added.

Statoil Warns

In 1987, Statoil reported a loss of 1.9 billion kroner. ($278.4 million), its first since 1979,- mainly because of a write-off of 3 billion kroner in cost overruns at Mongstad. "I cannot rule out that major write-offs will become necessary," said Haakon Lavik, a spokesman. "But we do expect a profit before year-end dispositions of around 3 billion to 4 billion kroner, compared with more than 6 billion last year." Stateil has said overruns for its Mongstad expansion project, excluding interest costs, would be 8 billion kroner.

CROWNS OF THORNS AND GLO-RY: Mary Todd Lincoln and Varina Howell Davis, The Two First Ladies of the Civil War

By Gerry Van der Heuvel. 352 pages. $19.95. E. P. Dutton, 2 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10016.

WHEN Jefferson Davis and his family were captured in 1865 and taken to occupied Savannah, Union soldiers amused themselves by teaching 3-year-old Billy Davis to sing, "We'll hang leff Davis from a sour apple tree," and two officers' wives from Maine grabbed the child on the street and tried to whip him. Helpless in her imprisonment, Var-ina Davis, whose emotional stability never deserted her, told her children to regard the bitterness as "a crown of thorns and glory."

At about the same time, Mary Todd Lincoln was going to pieces in a Chicago hotel, her paranoia gathering steam as she evaded bill collectors, fought with Congress over her widow's pension and endured the slanders against ber in one of the United States's first kiss-andtell books. "Behind the Scenes: Thirty Years a Slave, and Four Years in the White House," ghostwritten for her former dressmaker, Lizzie Keckley.

The two women who for four years simulta-occurs of the position of first lady never met, but they have been brought together in this superbly written and consistently read-able dual biography.

Their differences and similarities dovetail in endlessly fascinating ways. The Lincolns were close in age but Varina was 17 years younger than Jefferson, whose first wife, the daughter of Zachary Taylor, died in his arms on their Presley's two-ruo homer broke an eighth-inning tie and the Mariners, who blew a 6-0 fourth-inning lead, hit a major-league record five sacrifice flies.

White Sox 6, Angels 3: In Ana-heim, California, Carlton Fisk and Kelly Paris hit back-to-back bome runs in the sixth to propel Chicago. Fisk's bomer was his 314th lifetime, tying him with Reggie Smith for 53d place on the all-time list; Paris's was his first in 174 majorleague at-bats.

Brewers 7, Orioles 2: In Baltimore. Rob Deer drove in four runs with a home run, double and two singles and Robin Yount added a two-run double to spark Milwaukee. The Orioles made three errors, leading to four uncarned runs.

Rangers 2, Indians 0: In Arlington, Texas, the Rangers won their first series since late June behind Jose Guzman's five-hitter. Cleveland has lost seven of its last eight games. Texas had lost seven series and split two since winning two of three games in Seattle from June 27-29. (AP, UPI)

Blue Jay pitcher Jim Clancy, who had hit Kevin Setizer earlier in the inning, seemed to be pleading for better control after narrowly missing Pat Tabler later in the sixth Sunday at Toronto. Tabler dusted himself off and delivered a single that put Kansas City ahead by 4-1 and knocked Clancy who had retired 16 of the first 17 batters he faced - out of a game eventually won by the Royals, 5-1.

training (his world indoor mark is 6.41). Of his 100-meter record, he said: "Who's going to break it?" Asked if he himself could do it, he replied: "Me? Sure." Johnson is widely regarded as a sensitive, gentle-spoken sort, but when he filled out a psychological profile recently, something else emerged. Instead of checking a square to indicate how aggressive he is ("not," "somewhat," "very"), he wrote: "Add another box."

He does not socialize much with other members of the national team, he does not confide much in those beyond his immediate family. After his hamstring injury, he went into temporary isolation in Jamaica rather than remain with the team and long-time coach Charlie Francis. "Til

"So be was oever short oo ambition." Francis said.

Since then Johnson has developed a rapport with Francis, a 1972 Olympie sprioter who shares Johnsoo's disdain of small talk. Francis perceives Johnsoo's insulation as directly related to what be does on the track. "He internalizes everything," he said. "He thinks it takes away his strength if he talks about things. He puts his strength oo the track; what counts to him is so mueb inside, and he doesn't care very much what others think."

But more and more frequently the world has intruded. Since he began to defeat Lewis regularly (he is 8-6 against him and has woo the last five times), he has become much sought after. During the six months off with his injury, he oot only had his misunderstanding with Francis but also ran himself ragged with international corporate commitments.

There was confusion in his overall management and with his income taxes, because of the several countries where he cams money, all of which has been resolved after some aggravation. Most of all, there have been the Blyleven must have swallowed hard before turning down a deal that could have brought him more than $2 million over the oext two seasons. It would have paid him $1 millioo in 1989 if he pitched 195 innings this season. He's only 48 shy of that now, and, if he pitched another 195 next season, would have had a $900,000 salary (with several clauses) guaranteed for 1990.

Will he get an offer to match that one? He's 37, on the disabled list with a sprained thumb and 7-11 with a 5.47 carned-run average.

Diver's Alcohol Level Reportedly Excessive

The Associated Press TAMPA, Florida - Olym pie diviog silver medalist Bruce Kimball had a blood alcohol level of 0.20 percent when his car crashed into a group of teen-agers last week, killing two and injuring six, The Tampa Tribune reported Sunday. Florida law presumes a person with a level of 0.10 percent to be intoxicated. The oewspaper said a state crime laboratory told Hillsborough County authorities that Kimball's level was 0.20 immediately after the accident. Prosecutors are awaiting written documentation of the test result

That do-or-die aspect ofteo makes this meet more competitive than the Olympics themselves. Evans put it in perspective, saying, "I am excited about the Olympics, but I have to get through the trials first."

A look at some of the other U.S. Olympic squads:

Archery — The tcam just fin-ished competing in Oxford, Ohio, in two U.S. championships: field and target.

Baseball - The team of collegians had a 20-3 record, in exhibition games through Saturday and has shut ont the Olympic teams from Taiwan and South Korea (a good omen, because the Olympic seeding places Taiwan first, South Korea secood and the Uoited States third). In progress is a sevengame series against a veteran Coban team.

Basketball (Men) - The team is playing contingents from the Na-tional Basketball Associatioo; the eight-game series started Sunday with the Olympic squad scoring a 90-82 victory. Seventeen players remain on the team, and five must be cur. The Americans will be favored in Scoul, although Coach John Thompsoo is still looking for a point guard and David Robinson, still on active duty as a Naval offi-

Coe Is Left Off British Olympic Squad

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — Sebastian Coe, a two-time Olympie 1,500-meter champion, was left off the Britisb team named Mooday for oext month's Olympie Games. Coe also was omitted from the 800 meters, for which he holds the world record.

for which he holds the world record. During the weekend's Olympic trials, Coe, 31, failed to reach the final of the 1,500 meters; his going to Seoul hinged on his gaining a wild-card entry in either the 1,500 or the 800 (he did oot run the latter in the trials). The first two finishers in every event automatically qualified, while the selectors who met Monday could pick a third competitor. Steve Cram, Steve Crabb and Peter Elliott were selected for the 1,500 and Cram, Elliott and Tom McKean for the 800. Elliott woo the 1,500 final, ahead of Crabb; Cram and McKean were 1-2 in the 800-meter final.

Mudd Gains First Victory on PGA Tour

MEMPHIS, Tennessee (AP) - Jodie Mudd, without a victory io seven years as a pro, sank two long birdie putts on the back nine Sunday en route to a one-shot victory over Peter Jacobsen and Nick Price in the St. Jude Classic golf tournament.

Modd, who finished at 15-under-par 273, made birdie putts of more than 25 feet (7.60 meters) at the 10th and 11th boles, both par-4s, to bluot challenges by Allan Rummells and Jacobsen and a late charge by Price.

Only two applicants were admitted that year, fore filming begins for two weeks of rehearsals that culminate with Landau and McQueen. Aided there hy the tutoring of Lee Strasberg, Harold Clurman, Elia Kazan and others, Landau's a run-through of the script that is photographed and edited on vidcotape as if were a kind of home movie

This oot only gives the director but the actors a preview of the movie hefore a frame of film is exposed, along with the chance to fine-tune the production. The technique, Landau said, helped him polish his portrayal of Karatz, a character from real life whom the actor envisaged as "a lonely New York Jewish guy with no family or friends about 10 years older than myself who sits in cafeterias and reads oewspapers and lives for deals."

"Abe grows radically during the film; it allowed me to create a character with many dimensions, one who is cold and rather callous at the beginning and grows into a warm, feeling and caring human

"I've spent a lot of time playing roles that didn't really challenge me. I suppose every actor feels that way. But if you're playing a heavy, there's a certain quality to the role in action-adventure movies that isn't demanding; you're using just a little fragment of your persocality because that's all that's needed.

"You want roles that have dimension. The role of Abe gave me that.

"Now, I suppose, a lot of the people who would have oever ought of me for this role to begin with will now think of me as nothing else but as Abe."

South Korea's best-known folkrock artist, Cho Yong Pil, has become the first singer from his country to perform in China --- but not without difficulty.
